

©CIL 18008 / GO GET 'EM HUTCH -#7. - "On Danger's Highway"
JUN 26 1922 ✓

The episode opens with the capture of Mott aboard the McClelland ship. Hutch turns him over to the harbor police. He then sees a small yacht guided by Hilton Lennox and Fay Vallon, and believing that they are the ones behind the plot, he speeds up the tug to overtake them. It is then that the storm comes up and Hutch performs his thrilling rescue. Paul, who was aboard the yacht when the storm came up, sides with Hutch after the latter has rescued him from the stormy waters. He tells Hutch of the plans of Lennox, and surprises the young man by disclosing that fact that Lennox is using Hutch's home for his headquarters.

As the McClelland estate had long been deserted, and as it was situated high on a cliff overlooking the Hudson, Lennox had decided it was the very place to control his operations. From an attic window he watched for heliograph messages from a small ship in the river. Paul was the sender of the messages, not disclosing that he had allied himself with Hutch. Meanwhile, Hutch made his way to his estate, determined to catch Lennox at his work. But the latter had planned well and had rigged up a death-dealing device to keep all intruders from interrupting his work. Hutch did not know of this and plunged right into the danger.

This document is from the Library of Congress
“Motion Picture Copyright Descriptions Collection,
1912-1977”

Collections Summary:

The Motion Picture Copyright Descriptions Collection, Class L and Class M, consists of forms, abstracts, plot summaries, dialogue and continuity scripts, press kits, publicity and other material, submitted for the purpose of enabling descriptive cataloging for motion picture photoplays registered with the United States Copyright Office under Class L and Class M from 1912-1977.

Class L Finding Aid:

<https://hdl.loc.gov/loc.mbrsmi/eadmbrsmi.mi020004>

Class M Finding Aid:

<https://hdl.loc.gov/loc.mbrsmi/eadmbrsmi.mi021002>

National Audio-Visual Conservation Center
The Library of Congress